ORDER GRANTING
PLAINTIFF'S 12(b)(6)
MOTION TO DISMISS,
INTER ALIA

BEFORE THE COURT are the Plaintiff's Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6)
Motion To Dismiss Defendant's Counterclaims (Ct. Rec. 262), and Plaintiff's Request For Judicial Notice In Support Of Its 12(b)(6) Motion (Ct. Rec. 265).

Oral argument was heard on June 4, 2009. Paul J. Dayton, Esq., argued

ORDER GRANTING PLAINTIFF'S
12(b)(6) MOTION TO DISMISS, INTER ALIA- 1

1 on behalf of Plaintiff Confederated Tribes Of The Colville Reservation
2 (“Tribes”). Mark E. Elliott argued on behalf of Defendant Teck Cominco 3 Metals, Ltd. (“Teck”).

4 5 I. BACKGROUND

6 In its Answer to the Second Amended Complaint of the Tribes (Ct. Rec 7 194), Defendant Teck asserts two CERCLA¹ counterclaims against the Tribes, 8 contending the Tribes caused and contributed to the hazardous substances 9 contamination of Lake Roosevelt. As part of its counterclaims against the 10 Tribes for cost recovery, contribution and declaratory relief, Teck alleges the 11 Tribes “are covered ‘persons’ within the meaning of that term as it is used in 12 CERCLA, 42 U.S.C. Section 9601(21).” The Tribes move to dismiss the 13 counterclaims, asserting they are not “person[s]” subject to liability under 14 CERCLA, 42 U.S.C. Section 9607(a), and therefore, that Teck’s counterclaims 15 are not based on “a cognizable legal theory.”

16 II. DISCUSSION

17 A. 12(b)(6) Standard/Judicial Notice

18 A Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal is proper only where there is either a "lack of a 19 cognizable legal theory" or "the absence of sufficient facts alleged under a 20 cognizable legal theory." Balistreri v. Pacifica Police Dept., 901 F.2d 696, 699 21 (9th Cir. 1990). In reviewing a 12(b)(6) motion, the court must accept as true 22 all material allegations in the complaint, as well as reasonable inferences to be 23 drawn from such allegations. Mendocino Environmental Center v. Mendocino

24
25 ¹ Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability 26 Act, 42 U.S.C. Section 9601 et. seq.

27 ORDER GRANTING PLAINTIFF’S
28 12(b)(6) MOTION TO DISMISS, INTER ALIA- 2

1 County, 14 F.3d 457, 460 (9th Cir. 1994); NL Indus., Inc. v. Kaplan, 792 F.2d 2 896, 898 (9th Cir. 1986). The sole issue raised by a 12(b)(6) motion is whether 3 the facts pleaded, if established, would support a claim for relief; therefore, no 4 matter how improbable those facts alleged are, they must be accepted as true for 5 purposes of the motion. Neitzke v. Williams, 490 U.S. 319, 326-27, 109 S.Ct.
6 1827 (1989).

7 Unless the court converts the Rule 12(b)(6) motion into a summary 8 judgment motion, or the defense is apparent from matters of which the court 9 may take judicial notice, the court cannot consider material outside the 10 complaint (e.g. facts presented in briefs, affidavits or discovery materials).
11 Arpin v. Santa Clara Valley Transp. Agency, 261 F.3d 912, 925 (9th Cir. 2001).
12 A matter that is properly the subject of judicial notice (Fed. R. Evid. 201) may 13 be considered along with the complaint when deciding a 12(b)(6) motion to 14 dismiss without converting the motion to one for summary judgment. MGIC 15 Indem. Corp. v. Weisman, 803 F.2d 500, 504 (9th Cir. 1986). The court may 16 properly consider matters of public record (e.g. pleadings, orders and other 17 papers on file in another action pending in the court; records and reports of 18 administrative bodies; or the legislative history of laws, rules or ordinances) as 19 long as the facts noticed are not subject to reasonable dispute. Intri-Plex
20 Technologies, Inc. v. Crest Group, Inc., 499 F.3d 1048, 1052 (9th Cir. 2007).

21 B. Statutory Language

22 42 U.S.C. Section 9607 imposes liability upon certain “persons” (i.e., 23 owner/operator, arranger, transporter) for costs incurred in responding to a 24 release of hazardous substances. “Person” is defined in Section 9601(21) as “an 25 individual, firm, corporation, association, partnership, consortium, joint venture, 26 commercial entity, United States Government, State, municipality, commission,

27 ORDER GRANTING PLAINTIFF’S
28 12(b)(6) MOTION TO DISMISS, INTER ALIA- 3

1 political subdivision of a State, or any interstate body.” “Indian tribe” is not 2 expressly included in this list and indeed, is defined separately at Section 3 9601(36).

4 “[W]hen the statute’s language is plain, the sole function of the courts- at 5 least where the disposition required by the text is not absurd- is to enforce it 6 according to its terms.” Hartford Underwriters Insurance Co. v. Union 7 Planters Bank, N.A., 530 U.S. 1, 6, 120 S.Ct. 1942 (2000). In Hartford, the 8 U.S. Supreme Court reiterated what it had previously said in Connecticut 9 National Bank v. Germain, 503 U.S. 249, 253-54, 112 S.Ct. 1146 (1992):

10 [I]n interpreting a statute a court should always turn first to 11 one, cardinal canon before all others. We have stated time and 12 again that courts must presume that a legislature says in a statute 13 what it means and means in a statute what it says there. [Citations 14 omitted]. When the words of a statute are unambiguous, then, 15 this first canon is also the last: “judicial inquiry is complete.”
 16 [Citation omitted].

17 CERCLA’s definition of “person” is plain. It does not include “Indian 18 tribes.” Finding that CERCLA liability cannot be imposed on Indian tribes per 19 the terms of the statute is not an “absurd” result. Whereas CERCLA 20 specifically provides for liability to an Indian tribe, 42 U.S.C. Section 21 9607(a)(4)(A) and 9607(f), it contains no specific provision for the liability of 22 an Indian tribe.² Furthermore, sovereigns will not be read into the term 23 “person” unless there is affirmative evidence that Congress intended to include

24 ²

25 Under the canon of statutory construction expressio unius est exclusio 26 alterius, the express mentioning of one thing implies exclusion of another.
 27 Thus, to the extent it is necessary to rely on any additional canons of statutory 28 construction beyond “plain meaning,” expressio unius est exclusio alterius supports the conclusion that Indian tribes are not “persons” subject to CERCLA liability.

1 sovereigns. Wilson v. Omaha Indian Tribe, 442 U.S. 653, 667, 99 S.Ct. 2529
2 (1979); Fayed v. CIA, 229 F.3d 272, 274 (D.C. Cir. 2000). Congress can waive 3 a tribe's immunity from suit, but that waiver must be clearly expressed.
4 Congress has plenary power over tribal sovereignty, but must make clear its 5 intent to limit that sovereignty. Santa Clara Pueblo v. Martinez, 436 U.S. 49, 6 56, 98 S.Ct. 1670 (1978); Fletcher v. United States, 116 F.3d 1315, 1328 (10th 7 Cir. 1997).³

8 Defendant Teck, as it must, acknowledges CERCLA is silent on the issue 9 of whether tribes are covered as "persons." Defendant acknowledges there is no 10 legislative history regarding whether Congress intended Indian tribes to be 11 subject to liability under CERCLA. Nevertheless, Defendant asserts this is of 12 no consequence since it is clear what CERCLA is intended to address, that 13 being holding parties responsible for cleaning up hazardous substances 14 contamination caused by them. Defendant, a foreign (Canadian) corporation, 15 which the Ninth Circuit in Pakootas v. Teck Cominco Metals, Ltd., 452 F.3d 16 1066, 1079 (9th Cir. 2006) found was subject to CERCLA liability despite the 17 fact that its disposal activity occurred in Canada, says there is no reason why an 18
19

21 Absent clear Congressional intent and an analysis of such intent, it 22 matters not that courts may have somehow inadvertently "implied" that Indian 23 tribes are "persons" subject to CERCLA liability. Defendant's reliance on 24 United States v. Atlantic Research Corp., 551 U.S. 128, 127 S.Ct. 2331, 2336 25 (2007), and United States v. Friedland, 152 F.Supp.2d 1234, 1247 (D. Colo.
26 2001), is not persuasive. Those cases did not specifically deal with the 27 question of whether Indian tribes are subject to liability under CERCLA.

28 ORDER GRANTING PLAINTIFF'S

1 Indian tribe should be treated any differently.⁴ This, however, ignores the fact 2 that “corporations” are specifically among the enumerated entities included 3 within the definition of “person” in 42 U.S.C. Section 9601(21), whereas Indian 4 tribes are not, and do not fall neatly into the definition of any of the other 5 enumerated entities. Furthermore, a foreign corporation is not generally entitled 6 to sovereign immunity, unlike an Indian tribe which has been recognized by the 7 United States Government. An Indian tribe simply is not just any other party for 8 the purpose of ascertaining whether liability is authorized by CERCLA.

9 Defendant Teck argues that CERCLA’s use of the term “municipality” 10 should be read in pari materia with other federal environmental statutes, 11 including the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act of 1976 (RCRA), 42
12 U.S.C. §§ 6901 et seq., the Safe Drinking Water Act (SDWA), 42 U.S.C. §§ 13 300f et. seq., and the Clean Water Act (CWA), 33 U.S.C. §§ 1251 et seq. Each 14 of those other environmental statute defines “person” to include 15 “municipalities,” and in turn, defines “municipalities” to specifically include 16 “Indian tribes.” 42 U.S.C. § 6903(13)(A); 42 U.S.C. § 300(f)(10); and 33
17 U.S.C. § 1362(4). In other words, the argument is that even though CERCLA 18 does not define the term “municipality,” the fact CERCLA defines “person” to 19 include municipalities should lead the court to conclude that CERCLA’s 20 definition of “person” includes Indian tribes.

21 The in pari materia canon of statutory construction is only employed

23 Although the “disposal activity” occurred in Canada, “releases” of 24 hazardous substances as a result of that “disposal activity” occurred in the 25 United States (specifically in Lake Roosevelt). Accordingly, in Pakootas, the 26 Ninth Circuit found Teck was subject to CERCLA and that CERCLA was not 27 being applied “extraterritorially.”

28 ORDER GRANTING PLAINTIFF’S
12(b)(6) MOTION TO DISMISS, INTER ALIA- 6

1 where a statute is ambiguous. For reasons set forth above, CERCLA is not 2 ambiguous with respect to whether Indian tribes are covered “persons” subject 3 to CERCLA liability. Moreover, application of in pari materia is problematic 4 because: 1) waiver of tribal sovereign immunity requires an expression of clear 5 intent on the part of Congress; and 2) even without regard to sovereign 6 immunity, CERCLA is distinct from other environmental statutes- RCRA, the 7 SDWA, and the CWA- and does not address precisely the same subject matter.
8 In Pakootas, the Ninth Circuit pointed out the distinction between CERCLA 9 and RCRA:

10 CERCLA is only concerned with imposing liability for 11 cleanup of hazardous waste disposal sites where there has 12 been an actual or threatened release of hazardous substances 13 into the environment. CERCLA does not obligate parties 14 (either foreign or domestic) liable for cleanup costs to cease 15 the disposal activities such as those that made them liable for 16 cleanup costs; regulating disposal activities is in the domain 17 of RCRA or other regulatory statutes.

18 452 F.3d at 1079 (emphasis added). RCRA regulates “disposal activities,” 19 whereas CERCLA concerns itself with liability for cleaning up hazardous 20 substances which have already been “disposed” and which have now been 21 released or are threatened to be released into the environment. See also 22 Meghrig v. KFC Western, Inc., 516 U.S. 479, 116 S.Ct. 1251, 1255 (1996) 23 (RCRA allows landowner to seek relief for present “imminent and substantial” 24 threats to health and/or environment; RCRA has an “immediate action” stance, 25 where CERCLA has a more traditional tort liability stance).

26 Furthermore, CERCLA treats an Indian tribe differently from a 27 municipality. For example, an Indian tribe is entitled to costs of a removal or 28 remedial action “not inconsistent with the national contingency plan,” 42 U.S.C.
Section 9607(a)(4)(A), whereas “any other person” (i.e., a municipality) must prove that costs incurred are “consistent with the national contingency plan,” 42

ORDER GRANTING PLAINTIFF’S
12(b)(6) MOTION TO DISMISS, INTER ALIA- 7

1 U.S.C. Section 9607(a)(4)(B). The latter contains a more rigorous evidentiary
2 burden. The costs associated with response action undertaken by an Indian tribe 3 can be avoided by the defendants only if the defendants can show they are not 4 consistent with the national contingency plan (NCP), whereas response action 5 costs incurred by “any other person” require that “other person” to show his 6 action is consistent with the NCP before he will be allowed to recover his costs.
7 Town of Bedford v. Raytheon, Co., 755 F.Supp. 469, 472 (D. Mass. 1991).

8 Finally, Defendant Teck contends an Indian tribe qualifies as either an 9 “association” or as a “consortium” under the definition of “person” in 42 U.S.C.
10 Section 9601(21). As with the term “municipality,” the terms “association” and 11 “consortium” are not specifically defined in CERCLA. CERCLA has existed 12 for nearly 30 years, and RCRA, with its definition of “municipalities” including 13 “Indian tribes,” has existed in excess of 30 years. In that time, Congress has had 14 more than an adequate opportunity to address any oversight regarding liability 15 of Indian tribes under CERCLA. If Congress intended to make Indian tribes 16 liable under CERCLA, one has to ask why it did not specifically include “Indian 17 tribes” among the entities covered by the term “person” in Section 9601(21), 18 nor specifically define “municipality,” “association,” or “consortium” to include 19 “Indian tribes.” It seems extremely implausible that Congress would simply 20 leave it to chance that some court would conclude an Indian tribe qualifies as 21 one of those entities subject to CERCLA liability.

22 There may be some very compelling policy reasons why Indian tribes 23 should not be exempt from CERCLA liability, but that is something Congress 24 needs to address, not this court. Defendant asserts that “[u]nder the Tribes’ 25 interpretation of CERCLA, an Indian tribe could never, under any 26 circumstances, be found to be a responsible party under CERCLA,” and “[a]s a 27 result, an Indian tribe could literally operate a dump for the disposal of

28 ORDER GRANTING PLAINTIFF’S
12(b)(6) MOTION TO DISMISS, INTER ALIA- 8

1 hazardous substances, with complete impunity under CERCLA.” However, 2 such a conclusion is of dubious validity inasmuch as a tribe’s disposal activities 3 would clearly be subject to regulation under RCRA as well as SDWA and the 4 CWA.

5 There is authority that when an Indian tribe files suit, it waives its 6 immunity as to counterclaims of a defendant that sound in recoupment. Berrey
7 v. ASARCO Incorporated, 439 F.3d 636, 643-45 (10th Cir. 2006); Rosebud Sioux
8 Tribe v. Val-U Constr. Co., 50 F.3d 560, 562 (8th Cir. 1995); and Jicarilla 9 Apache Tribe v. Andrus, 687 F.2d 1324, 1344 (10th Cir. 1982). Claims in 10 recoupment arise out of the same transaction or occurrence, seek the same kind 11 of relief as the plaintiff, and do not seek an amount in excess of that sought by 12 the plaintiff. Berrey, 439 F.3d at 643. Sovereign immunity is waived because 13 “recoupment is in the nature of a defense arising out of some feature of the 14 transaction upon which the [sovereign’s] action is grounded.” Id., quoting Bull 15 v. United States, 295 U.S. 247, 262, 55 S.Ct. 695 (1935). Waiver under the 16 doctrine of recoupment does not depend on prior waiver by the sovereign or an 17 independent congressional abrogation of immunity. Id. at 644. In Berrey, the 18 Tenth Circuit held the defendants’ counterclaims for common law contribution 19 and indemnity against the Quapaw Tribe were not waived because those 20 counterclaims sounded in recoupment. The Tribe also argued for dismissal of 21 defendants’ CERCLA counterclaims for contribution, contending the 22 counterclaims were not permitted because CERCLA’s definition of “person” 23 does not include Indian tribes. The Tenth Circuit held it did not have 24 jurisdiction over the issue and declined to address the argument. Id. at 646.

25 In Berrey, the Quapaw Tribe sought dismissal of CERCLA counterclaims 26 based on statutory interpretation, not tribal sovereign immunity. So too here, 27 the Confederated Tribes Of The Colville Reservation seek dismissal of 28

ORDER GRANTING PLAINTIFF’S
12(b)(6) MOTION TO DISMISS, INTER ALIA- 9

1 Defendant's CERCLA counterclaims based on statutory interpretation, not 2 sovereign immunity. As is apparent, however, the court's interpretation of 3 CERCLA is necessarily colored by sovereign immunity principles.

4 5 C. EPA Interpretation and Indian Canons of Construction

6 Because the plain language of CERCLA reveals that Indian tribes are not 7 subject to liability under that statute, there is no reason for the court to consider 8 how EPA has interpreted CERCLA as it pertains to tribal liability. CERCLA is 9 not silent or ambiguous on this issue and accordingly, there is no reason for the 10 court to consider and give deference to EPA's interpretation. Chevron U.S.A.
11 Inc. v. Natural Resources Defense Council, Inc., 467 U.S. 837, 842-43, 104
12 S.Ct. 2778 (1984). Congressional intent to exclude Indian tribes from liability 13 is clear from the language of the statute, a conclusion that is reinforced by the 14 fact there is no affirmative evidence that Congress intended to include 15 sovereigns in the definition of "person."

16 For the same reasons, the court need not consider application of Indian 17 law canons of construction in determining whether there is tribal liability under 18 CERCLA.

19 III. CONCLUSION

20 The Colville Confederated Tribes' Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) Motion To 21 Dismiss Defendant's Counterclaims (Ct. Rec. 262) is GRANTED. Defendant's 22 CERCLA counterclaims against the Tribes are DISMISSED with prejudice as 23 they are not premised on a cognizable legal theory. The legal deficiency of 24 these counterclaims cannot be cured by an amended complaint or by any other 25 means. The Tribes' Request For Judicial Notice In Support Of Its 12(b)(6) 26 Motion (Ct. Rec. 265) is DISMISSED as moot since it is unnecessary to
